How Should I Dispose of My Vitalist Health Band?

Inas B. - 2026-11-15 - Health, Safety & Support

The Vitalist Health Band contains electronic components and a rechargeable battery. It should not be thrown away with ordinary household rubbish.

When your band reaches the end of its useful life:

- Use a local electronic waste (e-waste) recycling service where available.
- Follow your local rules for disposing of rechargeable batteries and electronic devices.
- Do not burn the band or place it in a fire.
- Do not crush, puncture, or dismantle the band.
- Keep damaged devices away from children and pets.

The battery is not designed to be removed or replaced by the user.

What if my band is damaged?

If the band becomes unusually hot, swells, leaks, or develops an unusual smell, stop using it. Do not attempt to open or repair it.

Contact Vitalist Support at support@vitalist.ca for guidance on safe handling and return arrangements.

If you are unsure where to recycle the band, check with your local waste management or e-waste recycling service.
